

No Time to Teach?

By Fran London

Book Review:

This is a great resource for educators and anyone that teaches patients, families, nurse, or students who have no time to teach. This book covers multiple ways of teaching using different type of technology that is currently available to the educator. I love the chapters on teaching toolbox and teachable moments.

Each chapter in the book has multiple references to many great resources including web sites. This book even has a chapter titled “A summary for Those Too Busy to Read This Book.”

It has been awhile since I have read this book and after reviewing to write this book review I am ready to pull ideas from this book to use in my future classes.

Submitted by Deborah Harley MSN BSN, RN Hospital Educator
Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System

